

Daily World

First Bank of the Delta announces three promotions

Jimbo Boyd, president and CEO of First Bank of the Delta and the First Bank Board of Directors, recently announced promotions for three First Bank employees – Frances Davidson, Leigh Ann Lammers and Dana Worstell.

“These promotions are well deserved,” stated Boyd. “The board recognizes and appreciates the dedication shown by each of these employees.”

Davidson was named assistant vice president. She serves as loan processing supervisor. She joined First Bank in 2001 and was associated with Merchants and Farmers Bank and Union Planters Bank. She has a total of 28 years of banking experience. She and husband Rickey have three children and five grandchildren.

Lammers was named vice president. She serves as the marketing director and human resources coordinator. Lammers joined the First Bank staff in 1996. She is a graduate of Arkansas

State University and the ABA School of Bank Marketing and Management. She is a member of the Rotary Club and Marvell United Methodist Church. She and husband Jeremy have two daughters, Lindsey and Taylor.

Worstell was named assistant vice president. She assists with deposit operations and handles training for bank employees. She has been employed with First Bank for 13 years. Worstell is a graduate of Central High School and PCCUA and attended the ABA National Compliance School. She is a member of Second Baptist Church in Helena. She is married to Chris and has a son, Dylan.

First Bank is a full service bank with seven branches in Phillips County and two loan offices in DeSoto County, Miss. First Bank has been serving Phillips County since 1931. They are part of Southern Bancorp, a three- bank holding company based in Arkadelphia.

Frances Davidson

Leigh Ann Lammers

Dana Worstell